Connecticut. United States court of appeals decided that persons displaced by federally-subsidized urban renewal projects have standing to seek appropriate relief in federal courts if adequate relocation facilities are not provided or are provided in a manner that deprives them of their constitutional or statutory rights, 425.

Delaware. Supreme court affirmed that local housing authority could be sued by tenant for injuries to minor children, 41.

District of Columbia. Court of appeals ruled that a landlord cannot evict a tenant for nonpayment of rent if the tenant can prove that housing code violations existed on the property at the time the tenant and the landlord entered into their lease, 78; Court of appeals held that a landlord cannot enforce a lease on premises that he knows are unfit for occupancy under the city housing code at the time the lease is executed. Also held that a tenant in such a situation could not be liable for payment of rent, 208. United States circuit court of appeals held that a landlord could not terminate the lease of a tenant solely in retaliation for the latter's having reported the existence of sanitary code violations in the leased premises to department of licenses and inspections, 312.

Georgia. Supreme Court affirmed the power of a housing authority to evict a tenant from public housing where it is found that the tenant has violated the lease agreement, has been given advance notice of the causes for eviction, and has had an opportunity to present a defense to the authority's charges, 207.

Kentucky. Court of appeals affairmed a state trial court's holding that the city of hazard municipal housing commission was liable for damages to a house caused by blasting operations of an independent contractor employed by the commission, 209; Circuit court held that a public housing authority chartered by the state had violated a tenant's constitutional rights to the due process and equal protection of the law by terminating his lease without notifying him of the cause for such action and without giving him an opportunity to present a defense against eviction, 312.

Massachusetts. Supreme judicial court held that dismissal of member of city housing authority was improper where there was no evidence that his advocacy of applicant for post of executive director of authority and his suggestion of 10-year work contract with salary increase for applicant, was in neglect of member's duty to recruit for qualified applicants, 100; Supreme judicial court has held that a local housing authority has only a limited responsibility to protect tenants from hazards existing on authority property, 426.

Nebraska. Supreme court held that the Omaha city council properly adopted a resolution declaring three privately-owned structures nuisances because of their structural deterioration and ordered demolition, 101.

Supreme court for Westchester County has held that LHA has to pay city sanitary sewer tax despite state public housing law exemption from taxes, 40; Appellate division of supreme court has affirmed that the housing authority had not acted in arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable manner when it denied admission to one of its projects because of previous history of juvenile offenses, 40; Appellate division of supreme court held that a contract for services between an attorney and a local housing authority was unenforceable because salary provisions in the contract had never been approved by the local governing body of the city in which the authority operated, 311.

North Carolina. Supreme court held that the motives of a local housing authority in selecting a site for a proposed low-rent housing project are not subject to judicial review so long as the site is adequate for its intended use, 311.

Pennsylvania. Supreme court decided that a taxpayer has standing to seek an injunction against housing authority that fails to abide by statutory requirement to accept lowest bid in granting service contract, 427.

Texas. Court of civil appeals held that a nonprofit housing corporation was not entitled to an exemption from ad valorem taxes because it did not qualify as purely a public charity, 100.

United States Supreme Court. May end bias in housing, 41; Held that an 1866 civil rights law bars all racial discrimination, private and public, in the sale or rental of property and that the statute, thus construed, is a valid exercise of the power of Congress to enforce the thirteenth amendment to the national constitution, 310.
